try for the ordinary readers and sixteen clubs jockeying for positions at the outset of a season that holds un-limited possibilities for real sport, Washingtonians have apparently over-looked the fact that across Rock Creek there is a baseball team that has done surprisingly well in the intercollegiate ranks.

When the call for talent was sounded during the early spring it appeared as though Georgetown would have only a mediocre team. Several of the men who had done valiant service in the past had graduated and the newcomers were not sufficiently impressive to justify the feeling that the Blue and Gray was in for anything more than an ordinary season.

Rain and a late spring further added to the working of these in charge. Unto the worries of those in charge. Unto the worries of those in charge. Un-til after the Holy Cross game on April 7, the squad got in practically no real outdoor practice. The men were kept working in the gymnasium, still, at best this was a poor substitute to conditioning on Georgetown field. Some of the northern teams on their south-ern trips had gone so far into Dixie that they were able to show here in comparatively good shape, giving them omparatively good shape, giving them distinct advantage over the west-

Cornell Oarsmen Again Triumph Over Foemen

ITHACA, N. Y., May 24 .- Cornell's siashing varsity eight-oared crew was forced to row its best yesterday to hold off the mighty eight which Princeton sent to Cayuga to take part in the three-cornered varsity race between Cornell, Frinceton and Yale. The Princetorians were in the race for every inch of the were in the race for every inch of the two miles, and at the finish were just a length behind the Cornell men. Yale rowed a disappointing race and was five lengths to the rear of the Tigers. Cornell made it a full day by defeating the Princeton freshman eight. In the race for the first-year crews by on the amount of "pepper" displayed by our club in rooting from the bench. When we started that big rally in the second New York game, the scene is our dugout was like that in the grandstand at a big college football game, only we had no organized "rah rahs." All of the players were out in front of the bench yelling, jumping around, throwing their hats in the air and in general behaving like maniacs.

Maybe you don't think that helps the fellows who are on the bases and at the bat! There is nothing more inspiring than to have your own team mates "julling" for you. It gives you confidence and determination to make good and, of course, has a tendency to demoralize the other side. When there isn't a word said on the bench, and you feel that nobody cares a rap whether you hit or strike out, your spirits are bound to droop. Here's hoping that we have reason to keep up this "pepper" all season.
